The Postdoc Day is a free, one-day symposium that aims to gather postdoctoral researchers from different institutions in Barcelona, particularly those in the biomedical field. This event is planned in two sessions: a career development session in the morning and a networking session in the afternoon. The first session will cover presentations from keynote speakers with different career backgrounds to discuss the career development opportunities in biomedicine. The second session will consist of dynamic networking activities to meet other postdocs and foster collaboration. It promises to be an enriching experience and a platform for discussing current and future challenges in biomedical research.
